Dear Amy Day

Please find enclosed an application for Uncaged Campaigns to a conduct a street collection in Leicester city centre in 2007.

Uncaged Campaigns is a UK-wide, not-for-profit, anti-vivisection and animal protection organisation. We campaign to end animal experiments and other animal cruelty by peaceful and legitimate means; to inform the public about cruelty-free shopping, and empower them to also campaign to end animal cruelty. Since its formation in Sheffield 13 years ago, Uncaged Campaigns has become established as one of the UK's most respected and hard-working anti-vivisection pressure groups. Uncaged Campaigns is regularly called upon to give interviews with the media, and have been behind several major exposes in the national press.

Uncaged Campaigns Director Dr. Dan Lyons is a Doctor of politics and philosophy from the University of Sheffield. He has had articles and/or extracts of articles published in publications such as New Scientist, the Bulletin of Medical Ethics, Medical Law Review and Learning Legal Skills; been interviewed for regional and national press, radio and TV. Uncaged Campaigns has also had full-page articles and letters published in several national newspapers and political magazines. Uncaged Campaigns' influence is brought to bear in many important areas:

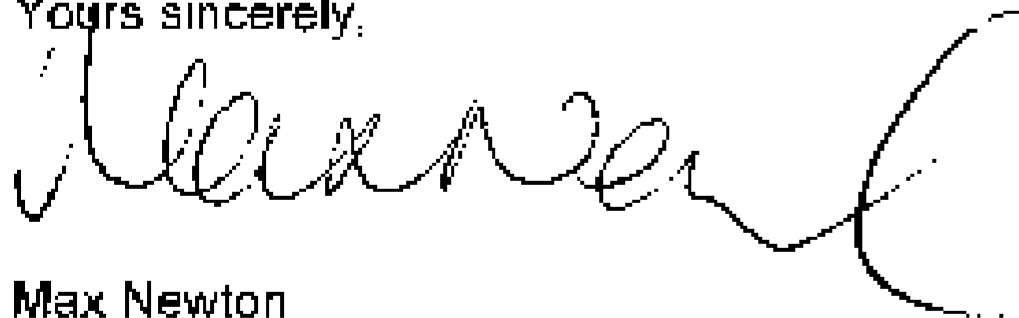

- Directly in the public sphere through street collections and street information stalls.
- Networking with thousands of active local campaigners across the UK and the world.
- Dignified and effective demonstrations against companies and institutions responsible for animal experimentation (always seeking to co-operate with the relevant police etc.).
- Appearances in international, national, regional and local media.
- High quality documents and reports that appear in journals (e.g. the Bulletin of Medical Ethics) and are used as references in academic papers.
- Winning active political support for our campaigns (for example 153 MPs from all parties signed our most recently tabled Early Day Motion)
- Participation in consultation exercises organised by Government bodies such as the Home Office, the Animal Procedures Committee and the Department of Health.
- Meetings with Government Ministers to discuss policy areas of concern.
- Our innovative Protecting Animals in Democracy (PAD) campaign to get animal protection issues on the political agenda. www.vote4animals.org.uk

We have successfully conducted street collections and information stalls in: Basildon, Nottingham, Chatham, Canterbury, Stockton, Solihull, Scarborough, Peterborough, Lincoln, Leeds, Bradford, Huddersfield, Slough, Abergavenny, Cardiff, Liverpool, St. Helens, Sheffield, Derby, Belfast & Bangor in Northern Ireland, Exeter, Aberdeen, Dundee, amongst many others.

Uncaged Campaigns is not-for-profit organisation limited by guarantee, with a registered company number of 3241514. It is without assets and relies entirely upon the generosity of the general public to fund our vital work and we have no assets. Public donations from street collections are where we derive the bulk of our funding from. This money is used to fund crucial, peaceful campaigns. However, because the organisation campaigns for a change in the law it cannot, legally, have a registered charity number.

However, Uncaged Campaigns does have a sister organisation, the Uncaged Educational Trust (UET), which is a registered charity, and whose remit is: "To advance the education of the public about vivisection and humane research", and whose charity number is: 1041426.

Yours sincerely,

Max Newton

THE ONE INGREDIENT THEY

HELP US STOP
PROCTER & GAMBLE
TESTING ON ANIMALS

PAIN AND SUFFERING ON AN UNIMAGINABLE LEVEL

P&G are researching new, ultratingly 'nanoparticles' for use in cosmetics and toiletries. Driven by the potential profits, P&G are now involved in pushing for a massive new animal testing programme into nanoparticles. These painful and lethal tests include inserting a needle into the animals' windpipes, force-feeding huge doses of the material, and rubbing it into raw, damaged skin.

The mouse above is one of the thousands of mice used by P&G in their animal testing.

PLEASE HELP IN OUR FIGHT TO END THE PROCTER & GAMBLE ANIMAL TESTING NIGHTMARE.

Procter & Gamble exist for one reason, and one reason only – to make as much money as possible. They test on animals (to push new chemical ingredients on to the market, so they can claim that their new skin cream or washing powder is 'new improved').

THE ANIMALS NEED YOUR HELP MORE THAN EVER

P&G admit that guinea pigs, rabbits, hamsters, ferrets, rats and mice are among the animals used in their 'product safety research'. Unceasing investigations have uncovered disturbing examples of P&G's involvement in painful and lethal animal tests.

WE BELIEVE WE CAN MAKE A DIFFERENCE

Money is the only language P&G understand. Ultimately, by boycotting P&G, you hold the key to saving the many thousands of animals who suffer and die every year in cruel and unnecessary tests conducted by this company.

BOYCOTT ALL THE P&G BRANDS

Acu	Canary	Febreze	Leaft's	Pampers	Wetex
Always & Always	Charmion	Fixadent	Lacrosse	Plantene	Wash'n'Go
Angel	Crear	Flask	Laural & Downey	Pringles	Wash'n'Go
Aussie	Dak	Gillette	Mia Factor	Shakira	Zest
Buit	Dreft	Ginger's Beverly Hills	Nivea 'n' Easy	SK-II
Hourge	Duracell	Herbal Essences	Dry	Showermoss
Downy Water Fall	Fukushima	Head & Shoulders	Oil Soave	Tanpax
Drain	Hyly	Hugo Boss	Oral B	Viskal

PET FOOD CRUELTY EXPOSED

P&G even make animals suffer for the development of their pet food brands, Janis and Eukanuba. Following a recent Unceasing campaign, P&G were forced to stop deliberately killing cats and dogs in such research. However, P&G continue to cause pain and distress to cats and dogs by imprisoning them in laboratories for years, and admit that they continue to kill other animals in cruel experiments.

NOW EVERYONE CAN SHOW THEIR SUPPORT FOR THE BOYCOTT BY GETTING INVOLVED

WE WANT EVERYONE TO BE CARRYING A 'BOYCOTT P&G' BAG

The Global Boycott of P&G is growing all the time. Unceasing are intensifying their campaigning to raise public awareness of P&G's animal testing to new levels. An original new tactic is the distribution of heavy-duty, recyclable, polythene carrier bags* that display a vital message. With your support, we can inspire millions more people to start shopping in a cruelty-free way.

FILL THE STREETS AND SUPERMARKETS WITH WELL INFORMED SHOPPERS AND MAKE P&G TAKE NOTICE

Show the world that you care and help spread the 'Boycott P&G' message. This compassionate campaign has the potential to have a massive impact. The vast majority of people are against P&G's animal tests and are prepared to boycott unethical companies. By carrying a 'Boycott P&G' bag you will help animals by educating people to the shocking cruelty behind these well-known brands.

* Please note the bag is not suitable for use as a shopping bag. Yours will be slightly different.

PLEASE SUPPORT THE GLOBAL BOYCOTT

PLEASE MAKE A DONATION IF YOU CAN - FILL IN THE FORM OVERLEAF

Unceasing are striving to make a huge national and global impact with the Global Boycott of P&G. But we need your donations to put our innovative and positive plans into action.

YOU ARE THE ANIMALS ONLY HOPE

You can also defend animals by choosing cruelty-free products, such as Co-op own brand or Lush. If you donate £10 or more, or set up a direct debit of at least £5 per month, you will receive a 'Boycott P&G' carrier bag and an 80-page guide to compassionate shopping.

URGENT NOTICE

Unceasing no longer recommends The Body Shop as they are being taken over by L'Oréal/Nestlé who test on animals.

Thank You

Every year in the UK almost 3 million animals suffer and die in experiments. Tackling such systematic, entrenched cruelty to animals requires real commitment and dedication.

Just a small regular gift of £5 a month will give a real boost to our campaigns to protect animals

Uncaged Campaigns use a persuasive combination of intelligence, dignity and compassion in our work to help protect animals. Our campaigns are peaceful and democratic. Uncaged Campaigns is a not-for-profit organisation, registered number 3241514.

Since our formation in 1993 Uncaged has scored some amazing victories for animals.

We have taken on and won a legal battle for freedom of information against one of the biggest pharmaceutical companies in the world.

We have alerted millions of people around the world to the cruel animal testing practices of Procter & Gamble through our annual global day of action. Our exposé of P&G's pet food brand IAMS made front page news.

Through our tenacious and professional work we empower people to speak up for animals, whether through dignified protests, effective political lobbying or international consumer boycotts.

"Your website and campaign are SO good. Your stickers, posters and suggested letter to newspapers have enabled me to do a great deal of awareness-raising that would not otherwise have been done. Thankyou! Thankyou for everything you do to speak up for animals" Ann, North Devon

Those who inflict suffering on animals for their own gain will not give up easily. Any worthwhile victory is hard fought and requires courage, determination and skill. Effective campaigning costs money, with your help we will go on to achieve more for innocent, helpless animals - together we are their only hope.

ANIMAL EXPERIMENTS

the truth revealed

uncaged

www.uncaged.co.uk

Vivisection: the fatal flaws

Despite deep public concern, every year millions of animals are killed in harmful experiments here in the UK. Vivisectionists would have us believe that the animals don't really suffer, that the experiments are "strictly regulated", and that there are no other ways to combat human disease. Here we explore the mounting evidence that explodes these cruel myths.

Human Health - Cancer, heart disease, stroke, AIDS, Parkinson's, multiple sclerosis, asthma, diabetes... the list of life-threatening diseases goes on and on. As many as 1 in 2 people will suffer heart problems, 1 in 3 will contract cancer, and childhood asthma is rising steeply. Are experiments on animals necessary to provide the cures?

Deadly Drugs - There is another big killer, one that we don't hear quite so much about - adverse drug reactions (ADRs). A concerned NHS executive has estimated that drug side-effects could be causing "70,000 deaths and cases of serious disability in England each year - putting ADRs behind only heart disease and stroke as a cause of death."

The drug industry - whose fundamental mission is to sell as many drugs for as much profit as possible - admits that most of its products are ineffective in most patients. With the vast majority of drugs sold on the back of animal tests, how can they claim that vivisection ensures safe and effective medicines?

Animals as Human Models? - The truth is that animal experiments are a cruel and fundamentally flawed method of medical research. Humans evolved from other animals millions of years ago. With each generation, each different species evolves a unique biology to help them survive in their environment.

Our bodies contain many systems such as those that coordinate immune reactions and hormones. These systems interact and work in incredibly complicated ways. Each small difference affects the way the whole body works. That's why each animal reacts differently to substances and suffers distinct diseases. For example, despite chimpanzees being our closest relatives, they do not develop human-type AIDS when injected with HIV.

Now, there is growing disgust and dissent in the scientific community as the the fatal weaknesses in vivisection are beginning to be taken on board. One group of researchers, publishing in the prestigious British Medical Journal in February 2004, uncovered evidence that "seriously undermined the principle that animal experiments are necessary to attain human medicine." But, old habits die hard, and that's why the campaigning work of Ungeared is so vital to stop this crude and barbaric practice.

Animal experiments: a 'very dirty guide' to health

Cancer - In March 2004 a survey amongst medical experts produced some hard-hitting analysis to explain why we're losing the war on cancer. Pharmaceutical research has concentrated heavily on experiments on mice. Even though mouse DNA is similar in some respects to human DNA, there are huge biological differences between mice and humans. Many cancer treatments that work in mice don't work in humans and, just as importantly - some of those that don't work in mice could work in humans. Richard Sullivan, head of clinical programmes at Cancer Research UK recently said "More and more we talk about man as the model. Animals are a very dirty guide."

At the May 2005 launch of the Nuffield report into animal experiments, Prof Steve Brown of the Government's Medical Research Council acknowledged that, despite the suffering of millions of animals in cancer and AIDS research, treatments had not worked in humans because the diseases induced in animals failed to replicate the human illness.

Multiple Sclerosis - In February 2004 a report published in the New Scientist stated scientists admit animal experiments delayed medical progress with research into Multiple Sclerosis (MS). Researchers studying human brain tissue from MS patients discovered that animal experiments had led to false theories about MS.

VIOXX - A painkiller that was prescribed to arthritis sufferers. In line with standard practice Vioxx was tested in at least two animal species before entering human trials. The experiments on animals indicated that the drug was safe and even beneficial to the heart. But when it went on to the market it caused an estimated 140,000 heart attacks and strokes. One expert suggested it was the world's worst drug disaster. Vioxx was withdrawn in 2004.

Humane Medical Progress

While promoters of vivisection like to give the impression that it is vital to human health, the reality is that 90% of medical research does not improve experimenting on animals. Instead, many medical researchers use a whole raft of different approaches to learn about human disease and develop treatments and medications. These examples are taken from Dr Ray Givock's book "Sacred Cows and Golden Geese", which analyses the medical relevance of animal research.

Clinical Studies of Humans - Careful observation and analysis of patients has led to many great discoveries and breakthroughs including the successful treatment of childhood leukaemia and our present level of HIV therapy. But, as many of you may have experienced, thorough investigation and diagnosis is rare in modern medicine. Improved observation would both help patient care and advance vital knowledge.

With consent from patients and volunteers, it is possible to study potential drugs by using very small doses and checking carefully for reactions. Autopsies and epidemiology (the study of how diseases spread in human populations) add to the vast amount of relevant knowledge that can be garnered by studying humans.

Test Tube Research - Scientists can study human cells 'in vitro' (literally 'in glass') and observe the effects of different chemicals. Advances in technology have led to the development of sensitive and sophisticated equipment that is able to monitor the cells and detect minute chemical changes that indicate potential poisons or medicines.

Scans - State of the art diagnostic imaging technology allows scientists to study any part of the human body. MRI scanners can monitor brain activity. Transcranial magnetic stimulation allows scientists to temporarily switch off specific areas of function in the human brain instead of the old fashioned approach of removing parts of animals brains.

Computer Modelling - Computers are able to simulate human body parts through complex mathematical equations. Scientists are using this method to model 'slices' of human brains to investigate disorders such as epilepsy. Computer graphics can create 3-D structures of drug molecules on screen, allowing scientists to study their potential. Useful drugs - such as the high blood pressure medication Captopril - have already been developed using this new technique.

Genetic Research - The Human Genome Project is bringing great changes in medicine. DNA sequencing and gene mapping allow scientists to discover what genes do. Different genes influence susceptibility to disease and help to predict how drugs can work.

Non-animal methods of research are being developed, but a lack of funding and apathy from scientists is widely acknowledged as a major problem.

PLEASE SIGN THE UNIVERSAL DECLARATION OF ANIMAL RIGHTS TODAY

TOGETHER WE CAN MAKE A DIFFERENCE

UNIVERSAL RESPECT

Following the atrocities of World War Two, the United Nations ratified the Universal Declaration of Human Rights on 10 December 1948. International Animal Rights Day is Uncegar's historic campaign to show that all animals – not just humans – deserve the right not to be tortured and murdered.

HUMAN AND ANIMAL RIGHTS

At first sight, the idea of animal rights might seem far-fetched. After all, the exploitation of animals is deeply entrenched in our society. But not so long ago, the notion of human rights also seemed like hopeless idealism. Slavery, and the abuse of women and children were taken for granted. The same arguments that were put forward to justify cruelty to oppressed humans are now being employed to defend horrific animal abuse.

Just because one group has been in a position to abuse its power over others, does not make it right. How we treat others must be based on reason, not blind adherence to traditional prejudice and a misplaced sense of self-interest. But because animal rights highlights inhumanish cruelty and challenges powerful vested interests, it's easier for people to turn their backs on it. Ignorance is bliss. We have to wake up to reality and act now.

PUT YOURSELF IN THEIR POSITION

What's the worst thing you can ever imagine happening to you or a loved one? Having your baby wrenched from you while you desperately scream their name and try to reach them? Being burnt alive? Having your eyes sewn up? Castrated without anaesthetic? Retching and vomiting blood, isolated in a laboratory cage as you're slowly poisoned to death? Being herded with your friends and family into a truck to be transported thousands of miles and then being murdered in front of one another? Spending your entire life trapped in a stinking windowless shed, knee-deep in faeces, lame and unable to reach food or water? The reality is that millions of animals suffer pain, confusion, fear and terror. As Darwin recognised, humans and other animals share the same senses, intuitions, sensations, passions, affections and emotions. Society must acknowledge the truth and finally grant animals the right they deserve.

ANIMAL RIGHTS = HUMAN BENEFITS

Recognising the rights of animals is not about sacrificing human interests. Animal experiments can not only be incredibly cruel, but are crude and unreliable as a guide to human biology. Factory farming not only poses health dangers, but is polluting and wasteful of the earth's scarce resources. Respecting animal rights is about the making the world a better place – for everyone.

DECEMBER 10 - TIME TO MAKE OURSELVES HEARD

Animals can't vote, protest or lobby MPs for protection. They are utterly defenceless in the face of human aggression. Animals need a voice and by signing up to the historic Universal Declaration of Animal Rights (UDAR) and supporting International Animal Rights Day, you can give them that voice.

Every single action you take makes a difference for better or for worse. It's important to boycott animal testing companies. Being veggie – or better still vegan – directly reduces animal suffering, can make you healthier, and even tackles climate change! It's also essential to act politically – politicians' decisions can save lives or death for millions of animals. Perhaps most important is setting a positive example of compassionate living.

SIGN UP TODAY AND MAKE A DIFFERENCE

Uncegar is at the forefront of a peaceful global movement to end animal abuse. Our momentum is growing as more and more people say 'enough is enough'. Please join with us to protect animals by signing up to the UDAR using the form on the reverse of this leaflet and by making a vital donation if you can.

Thank you.

'The assumption that animals are without rights, and the illusion that our treatment of them has no moral significance, is a positively outrageous example of crudity and barbarity. Universal compassion is the only guarantee of morality.'

Arthur Schopenhauer, philosopher.

23rd January 2007

Dear Sarah Miller

Thank you for your letter of 18 January 2007 regarding Uncaged Campaigns' application to conduct a street collection in the City of Leicester on 22 September 2007 (REF: PS/LIC/St.coll/jp).

As a not-for-profit organisation Uncaged Campaigns is without assets and relies entirely upon the generosity of the general public to fund our vital work and we have no assets. Public donations from street collections are where we derive the bulk of our funding from. This money is used to fund crucial, peaceful campaigns; to inform the public about cruelty-free shopping and lifestyles (which can make a huge difference to animal suffering); and to empower the public with the information and the means to try and effect change themselves.

To this end we conduct dozens of street collections throughout the UK every year; including: Nottingham, Loughborough, Peterborough, Sheffield, Leeds, Liverpool, Cardiff, Bristol, Exeter, Torquay, Brighton & Hove, Eastbourne, Ramsgate & Margate, Canterbury, Chatham, Tunbridge Wells, Maidenhead & Windsor, Bracknell, High Wycombe, Dundee, Aberdeen etc. We have conducted 8 London Wide Street Collections under the authority of the London Metropolitan Police, and are booked in for our 9th on 21st July 2007. Gloria Paine of the London Metropolitan Police authorises these collections, and she can be contacted on: 0207 230 4015

Uncaged Campaigns conducted a very successful street collection in the City of Leicester last year (Saturday 23 September) – being granted permission after I appeared before the Licensing Sub-Committee earlier in the year.

Because the organisation campaigns for a change in the law it cannot, legally, have a registered charity number. This put us in a similar position to organisations like the BUAV (British Union for the Abolition of Vivisection), NAVS (National Anti Vivisection Organisation), Animal Aid (the national organisation based in Tunbridge Wells, with Andrew Tyler as Director) and who are all not-for-profit organisations that cannot have registered charity numbers, but who all operate like charities and conduct street collections across the UK. In effect the charity law regarding registered charity status means that charities are only allowed to alleviate suffering, not to lobby politically for change to prevent it!

A company limited by guarantee is a fairly common type of company, widely used for charities, clubs, schools, and professional and trade associations. No shares are issued, so there is no share capital or shareholders. Instead it is made up of members who agree to contribute a membership fee or subscription. The members are guarantors instead of shareholders. The liability of its members limited by the memorandum to such amounts as the members may respectively undertake to contribute to the assets of the company. Any 'profits' are not distributed as dividends, but used to support the activities for which the organisation is formed.

As such, Uncaged Campaigns is registered with companies house as a 'not for profit organisation limited by guarantee,' Reg. Comp. No. 3241514.

Uncaged Campaigns is very much like a charity in how it is set up, where it draws its funding from, how it is allowed to raise funds, and in that its activities and aims are philanthropic – it just cannot have a registered number.

'Pet' Foods and Their Animal Testing Policies

The companion animal food industry has become big business in recent years. The market is currently dominated by international corporations – such as Procter & Gamble, the makers of IAMS and Eukanuba - who ruthlessly conduct experiments on animals to try to give their pet food a competitive marketing edge. Slick advertising campaigns that promote a caring image obscure a reality of suffering and exploitation. However, as these cruel and unethical practices are being exposed through the work of Uncaged and others, decent animal guardians are seeking out responsible companies who produce pet food without cruel and unethical testing regimes.

Uncaged is determined to work with other animal protection groups to persuade the companion animal food industry to clean up its act. Uncaged supports and promotes the BUAV's new 'No Animal Testing Pet Food Standard'. For companies to qualify, they have to prove that neither they nor their suppliers are engaged in animal testing that harms animals: that means no invasive laboratory experiments or keeping animals in captive laboratory or kennel conditions for lengthy periods of time – conditions that cannot fulfil their physical and psychological needs.

You can be assured that this recommended list of foods is a reliable guide to non-animal tested products.

Every year in the UK almost 3 million animals suffer and die in experiments. Tackling such systematic, entrenched cruelty to animals requires real commitment and dedication.

Just a small regular gift of £5 a month will give a real boost to our campaigns to protect animals

Uncaged Campaigns use a persuasive combination of intelligence, dignity and compassion in our work to help protect animals. Our campaigns are peaceful and democratic. Uncaged Campaigns is a not-for-profit organisation, registered number 3241514.

Since our formation in 1993 Uncaged has scored some amazing victories for animals.

We have taken on and won a legal battle for freedom of information against one of the biggest pharmaceutical companies in the world.

We have alerted millions of people around the world to the cruel animal testing practices of Procter & Gamble through our annual global day of action. Our expose of P&G's pet food brand IAMS made front page news.

Through our tenacious and professional work we empower people to speak up for animals, whether through dignified protests; effective political lobbying or international consumer boycotts.

"Your website and campaign are SO good. Your stickers, posters and suggested letter to newspapers have enabled me to do a great deal of awareness-raising that would not otherwise have been done. Thankyou! Thankyou for everything you do to speak up for animals" Ann, North Devon

Those who inflict suffering on animals for their own gain will not give up easily. Any worthwhile victory is hard fought and requires courage, determination and skill. Effective campaigning costs money, with your help we will go on to achieve more for innocent, helpless animals - together we are their only hope.

Vivisection: the fatal flaws

Despite deep public concern, every year millions of animals are killed in harmful experiments here in the UK. Vivisectionists would have us believe that the animals don't really suffer, that the experiments are "strictly regulated", and that there are no other ways to combat human disease. Here we explore the mounting evidence that explodes these cruel myths.

Human Health - Cancer, heart disease, stroke, AIDS, Parkinson's, multiple sclerosis, asthma, diabetes... the list of life-threatening diseases goes on and on. As many as 1 in 2 people will suffer heart problems, 1 in 3 will contract cancer, and childhood asthma is rising steeply. Are experiments on animals necessary to provide the cures?

Deadly Drugs - There is another big killer, one that we don't hear quite so much about - adverse drug reactions (ADRs). A concerned NHS executive has estimated that drug side-effects could be causing "70,000 deaths and cases of serious disability in England each year - putting ADRs behind only heart disease and stroke as a cause of death."

The drug industry - whose fundamental mission is to sell as many drugs for as much profit as possible - admits that most of its products are ineffective in most patients. With the vast majority of drugs sold on the back of animal tests, how can they claim that vivisection ensures safe and effective medicines?

Animals as Human Models? - The truth is that animal experiments are a cruel and fundamentally flawed method of medical research. Humans evolved from other animals millions of years ago. With each generation, each different species evolves a unique biology to help them survive in their environment.

Our bodies contain many systems such as those that coordinate immune reactions and hormones. These systems interact and work in incredibly complicated ways. Each small difference affects the way the whole body works. That's why each animal reacts differently to substances and suffers distinct diseases. For example, despite chimpanzees being our closest relatives, they do not develop human-type AIDS when injected with HIV.

Now, there is growing disquiet and dissent in the scientific community as the full weaknesses in vivisection are beginning to be taken on board. One group of researchers, publishing in the prestigious British Medical Journal in February 2004, uncovered evidence that "seriously undermined the principle that animal experiments are necessary to inform human medicine." But, old habits die hard, and that's why the campaigning work of Ungeared is so vital to stop this crude and barbaric practice.

Animal experiments: a 'very dirty guide' to health

Cancer - In March 2004 a survey amongst medical experts produced some hard hitting analysis to explain why we're losing the 'war on cancer'. Pharmaceutical research has concentrated heavily on experiments on mice. Even though mouse DNA is similar in some respects to human DNA, there are huge biological differences between mice and humans. Many cancer treatments that work in mice don't work in humans and, just as importantly - some of those that don't work in mice could work in humans. Richard Sullivan, head of clinical programmes at Cancer Research UK recently said "More and more we talk about man as the model. Animals are a very dirty guide."

At the May 2005 launch of the Muffield report into animal experiments, Prof. Steve Brown of the Government's Medical Research Council acknowledged that, despite the suffering of millions of animals in cancer and AIDS research, treatments had not worked in humans because the diseases induced in animals failed to replicate the human illness.

Multiple Sclerosis - In February 2004 a report published in the New Scientist stated scientists admit animal experiments delayed medical progress with research into Multiple Sclerosis (MS). Researchers studying human brain tissue from MS patients discovered that animal experiments had led to false theories about MS.

VIOXX - A painkiller that was prescribed to arthritic sufferers. In line with standard practice Vioxx was tested in at least two animal species before entering human trials. The experiments on animals indicated that the drug was safe and even beneficial to the heart. But when it went on to the market it caused an estimated 240,000 heart attacks and strokes. One expert suggested it was the world's worst drug disaster. Vioxx was withdrawn in 2004.

Humane Medical Progress

While promoters of vivisection like to give the impression that it is vital to human health, the reality is that 90% of medical research does not involve experimenting on animals. Instead, many medical researchers use a whole raft of different approaches to learn about human disease and develop treatments and medications. These examples are taken from Dr Ray Grock's book "Sacred Cows and Golden Geese", which analyses the medical relevance of animal research.

Clinical Studies of Humans - Careful observation and analysis of patients has led to many great discoveries and breakthroughs including the successful treatment of childhood leukaemia and our present level of HIV therapy. But, as many of you may have experienced, thorough investigation and diagnosis is rare in modern medicine. Improved observation would both help patient care and advance vital knowledge.

With consent from patients and volunteers, it is possible to study potential drugs by using very small doses and checking carefully for reactions. Autopsies and epidemiology (the study of how diseases spread in human populations) add to the vast amount of relevant knowledge that can be garnered by studying humans.

Test Tube Research - Scientists can study human cells 'in vitro' (literally 'in glass') and observe the effects of different chemicals. Advances in technology have led to the development of sensitive and sophisticated equipment that is able to monitor the cells and detect minute chemical changes that indicate potential poisons or medicines.

Scans - State of the art diagnostic imaging technology allows scientists to study any part of the human body. MRI scanners can monitor brain activity. Transcranial magnetic stimulation allows scientists to temporarily switch off specific areas of function in the human brain instead of the old fashioned approach of removing parts of animals brains.

Computer Modelling - Computers are able to simulate human body parts through complex mathematical equations. Scientists are using this method to model 'slices' of human brains to investigate disorders such as epilepsy. Computer graphics can create 3-D structures of drug molecules on screen, allowing scientists to study their potential. Useful drugs - such as the high blood pressure medication Captopril - have already been developed using this new technique.

Genetic Research - The Human Genome Project is bringing great changes in medicine. DNA sequencing and gene mapping allow scientists to discover what genes do. Different genes influence susceptibility to disease and help to predict how drugs can work.

Non-animal methods of research are being developed, but a lack of funding and apathy from scientists is widely acknowledged as a major problem.

PLEASE SIGN THE UNIVERSAL DECLARATION OF ANIMAL RIGHTS TODAY

TOGETHER WE CAN MAKE A DIFFERENCE

UNIVERSAL RESPECT

Following the atrocities of World War Two, the United Nations ratified the Universal Declaration of Human Rights on 10 December 1948. International Animal Rights Day is Ungeared's historic campaign to show that all animals – not just humans – deserve the right not to be tortured and murdered.

HUMAN ANTI-ANIMAL RIGHTS

At first sight, the idea of animal rights might seem far-fetched. After all, the exploitation of animals is deeply entrenched in our society. But not so long ago, the notion of human rights also seemed like hopeless idealism. Slavery, and the abuse of women and children were taken for granted. The same arguments that we've put forward to justify cruelty to oppressed humans are now being employed to defend horrific animal abuse.

Just because one group has been in a position to abuse its power over others, does not make it right. How we treat others must be based on reason, not blind adherence to traditional prejudice and a misplaced sense of self-interest. But because animal rights highlights nightmarish cruelty and challenges powerful vested interests, it's easier for people to turn their backs – ignorance is bliss. We have to wake up to reality and act now.

PUT YOURSELF IN THEIR POSITION

What's the worst thing you can ever imagine happening to you or a loved one? Having your baby wrestled from you while you desperately scream their name and try to reach them? Being burnt alive? Having your eyes sewn up? Castigated without anaesthetic? Retching and vomiting blood, isolated in a laboratory cage as you are slowly poisoned to death? Being herded with your friends and family into a truck to be transported thousands of miles and then being murdered in front of one another? Spending your entire life trapped in a stir-kirk windowless shed, knee-deep in faeces, lame and unable to reach food or water? The reality is that millions of animals suffer pain, confusion, fear and terror. As Darwin recognised, humans and other animals share 'the same senses, intuitions, sensations, passions, affections and emotions'. Society must acknowledge the truth and finally grant animals the rights they deserve.

ANIMAL RIGHTS – HUMAN BENEFITS

Recognising the rights of animals is not about sacrificing human interests. Animal experiments can not only be incredibly cruel, but are crude and unreliable as a guide to human biology. Factory farming not only causes health dangers, but is polluting and wasteful of the earth's scarce resources. Respecting animal rights is about making the world a better place – for everyone.

DECEMBER 11 – TIME TO MAKE OURSELVES HEARD

Animals can't vote, protest or lobby MPs for protection. They are utterly defenceless in the face of human aggression. Animals need a voice and by signing up to the historic Universal Declaration of Animal Rights (UDAR) and supporting International Animal Rights Day, you can give them that voice.

Every single action you take makes a difference for better or for worse. It's important to boycott animal testing companies. Being veggie – or better still, vegan – directly reduces animal suffering, can make you healthier, and even tackles climate change! It's also essential to act politically – politicians' decisions can spell life or death for millions of animals. Perhaps most important is setting a positive example of compassionate living.

SIGN UP TODAY AND MAKE A DIFFERENCE

Ungeared is at the forefront of a peaceful global movement to end animal abuse. Our momentum is growing as more and more people say 'enough is enough'. Please join with us to protect animals by signing up to the UDAR using the form on the reverse of this leaflet and by making a vital donation if you can.

Thank you.

The assumption that animals are without rights, and the illusion that our treatment of them has no moral significance, is a positively outrageous example of crudity and barbarity. Universal compassion is the only guarantee of morality.

Arthur Schopenhauer, philosopher.

In nature, mothers and calves remain closely bonded for several months until the calf reaches adulthood. But in farming, mother and baby are swiftly separated for financial gain – causing great distress.

THE UNIVERSAL DECLARATION OF ANIMAL RIGHTS

In as much as there is ample evidence that many animal species are capable of feeling, we condemn totally the infliction of suffering upon our fellow creatures and the curtailment of their behavioural and other needs save where this is necessary for their own individual benefit.

I do not accept that a difference in species alone (any more than a difference in race) can justify wanton exploitation or oppression in the name of science or sport, or for use as food, for commercial profit or for other human gain.

I believe in the evolutionary and moral kinship of all animals and declare our belief that all sentient creatures have the rights to life, liberty and natural enjoyment.

I therefore call for the protection of these rights.

INTERNATIONAL ANIMAL RIGHTS DAY

PAIN AND SUFFERING ON AN UNIMAGINABLE LEVEL

P&G are researching new, ultra-fine 'nanoparticles' for use in cosmetics and toiletries. Driven by the potential profits, P&G are now involved in pushing for a massive new animal testing programme into nanoparticles. These painful and lethal tests include inserting a needle into the animals' windpipes, force-feeding huge doses of the material, and rubbing it into raw, damaged skin.

For more information visit www.petfriendly.org.uk or contact info@petfriendly.org.uk

PLEASE HELP IN OUR FIGHT TO END THE PROCTER & GAMBLE ANIMAL TESTING NIGHTMARE.

Procter & Gamble exist for one reason, and one reason only - to make as much money as possible. They test on animals to push new chemical ingredients on to the market, so they can claim that their new skin cream or washing powder is 'now improved'.

THE ANIMALS NEED YOUR HELP MORE THAN EVER

P&G admit that guinea pigs, rabbits, hamsters, ferrets, rats and mice are among the animals used in their 'product safety research'. Unceasing investigations have uncovered disturbing examples of P&G's involvement in painful and lethal animal tests.

WE BELIEVE WE CAN MAKE A DIFFERENCE

Money is the only language P&G understand. Ultimately, by boycotting P&G, you hold the key to saving the many thousands of animals who suffer and die every year in cruel and unnecessary tests conducted by this company.

PET FOOD CRUELTY EXPOSED

P&G even make animals suffer for the development of their pet food brands, Iams and Eukanuba. Following a recent Unceasing campaign, P&G were forced to stop deliberately killing cats and dogs in such research. However, P&G continue to cause pain and distress to cats and dogs by imprisoning them in laboratories for years, and admit that they continue to kill other animals in cruel experiments.

NOW EVERYONE CAN SHOW THEIR SUPPORT FOR THE BOYCOTT BY GETTING INVOLVED

WE WANT EVERYONE TO BE CARRYING A 'BOYCOTT P&G' BAG

The Global Boycott of P&G is growing all the time. Unceasing are intensifying their campaigning to raise public awareness of P&G's animal testing to new levels. An original new tactic is the distribution of heavy-duty, recyclable, polythene carrier bags* that display a vital message. With your support, we can inspire millions more people to start shopping in a cruelty-free way.

FILL THE STREETS AND SUPERMARKETS WITH WELL INFORMED SHOPPERS AND MAKE P&G TAKE NOTICE

Show the world that you care and help spread the 'Boycott P&G' message. This compassionate campaign has the potential to have a massive impact. The vast majority of people are against P&G's animal tests and are prepared to boycott unethical companies. By carrying a 'Boycott P&G' bag you will help animals by educating people to the shocking cruelty behind these well-known brands.
