

Lobby groups and declarations of interest under the Code of Conduct

Relevant Code paragraphs: 8 – 12

Summary: This document provides key information and answers frequently asked questions about lobby groups and declarations of interest under the 2007 revised Code of Conduct for members.

Date published: 1 October 2007

Key facts

The revised Code of Conduct

- The Code of Conduct was revised in 2007. It is now less restrictive than the 2001 Code for members who participate in campaigns or are members of lobby groups. Some members, who found they were prevented by the 2001 Code from voting on a matter important to them or their lobby group, will not have a prejudicial interest under the revised Code of Conduct.

Register of interests

- Membership of lobby or campaign groups should be included on your register of interests, as these are bodies “whose principal purposes include the influence of public opinion or policy” under paragraph 8(1)(ii)(cc).
- Even if your lobby group does not keep a formal membership list, the Code of Conduct still applies to you. If you are acting as a member of the group – perhaps attending meetings or participating in group activities – you should still register your membership of the group and declare interests, where appropriate.

Personal interests

- The Code of Conduct requires you to declare a personal interest in any matter relating to an interest you must include in your register of interests.
- You are required to declare a personal interest if you are a member of a group that lobbies or campaigns about an issue that comes up for discussion or decision at your authority.
- You should declare the existence and nature of your interest at the meeting so that members of the public are informed about interests that may relate to your decisions. You can continue to participate unless the interest is also prejudicial (see the section on prejudicial interests below).
- You may not have a personal interest in a related discussion or decision of your authority if you merely campaigned on an issue as an individual and not as member of a relevant lobby group - for example, if you tackled an issue as part of your election campaign.

However, you should still consider the general test for personal and prejudicial interests and whether there is any other reason why you should not participate in the decision, including the possibility of bias.

You may want to discuss your circumstances with your monitoring officer. For information on bias and predetermination, see our occasional paper, which is available from our website - www.standardsboard.gov.uk

Prejudicial interests

Under the Code of Conduct, you only have to withdraw from a meeting where your personal interest is also prejudicial.

Exceptions

You cannot have a prejudicial interest in a matter if:

- a) The matter falls within one of the exempt categories of decisions under paragraph 10(2)(c), for example, any ceremonial honour given to members. A full list of exempt categories can be found in the Standards Board's Code of Conduct guidance, which is available on our website - www.standardsboard.gov.uk
- b) The matter does not affect your financial interests or does not relate to a licensing or regulatory matter brought by you or a person or body in which you have a personal interest.

For example, you will not have a prejudicial interest in a developer's planning proposal which you and your lobby group have campaigned against, if you, any person, or any body you have a personal interest in is not financially affected by the proposal.

The planning proposal might indirectly affect your lobby or campaign group since it relates to things it campaigns for or has expressed public opinions about. However, in this context, it will not be relevant for the purposes of the Code.

Nevertheless, you may have a prejudicial interest where the matter is an application for a grant for funding for a body on your register of interests, or a planning or licensing application made by you, a person or a body on your register of interests.

If your personal interest in a matter falls outside the exempt categories mentioned in a) above, and does affect your financial or regulatory interests, you will then have to consider the following general test for prejudicial interests:

Would a member of the public, who knows the relevant facts, reasonably think your personal interest is so significant that it is likely to prejudice your judgement of the public interest?

If the answer is 'yes' then you would have a prejudicial interest.

Frequently asked questions

Q1 How has the Code of Conduct changed for members of lobby or campaign groups?

Under the original Code of Conduct 2001, members of lobby groups were required to consider whether the indirect impact of a decision on their group would give rise to a prejudicial interest under the general test (see above). As a result, members declared personal and prejudicial interests in matters which they or their group had campaigned on or had expressed public opinions about.

Under the revised Code, members will not be prevented under the Code of Conduct from voting on a matter if their only interest is that they hold views on the matter, for example based on their experiences or political outlook.

Q2 Do I have a personal and prejudicial interest if I am a member of a group that campaigned against a planning application submitted by a developer?

No. You will only have a personal interest which you should declare the existence and nature of at the meeting considering the application. This is so that members of the public are informed about interests that may relate to your decisions.

However, you should still consider the general test for personal and prejudicial interests and whether there is any other reason why you should not participate in the decision, including bias. You may want to discuss your circumstances with your monitoring officer.

Q3 What should I do if my membership of a pro-development campaign does not give rise to a prejudicial interest, but I have other interests that may be relevant?

You still need to consider whether you have any personal interests that may also be prejudicial interests. For example, a prejudicial interest is likely to exist where a particular development financially affects your sister, as her property is two doors away from the development site. Please see our specific factsheet entitled Personal and Prejudicial Interests.
